BADEN ACADEMY

Rude, Mean, or Bullying?

Not all hurtful behavior is bullying. Understanding the difference helps us respond in the right way and keeps our Baden Academy community safe, kind, and respectful.

RUDE

THOUGHTLESS BEHAVIOR

Rude behavior is unintentional and often happens in the moment. It is usually the result of not thinking or being unaware of how our actions affect others.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

- Happens by accident
- Usually not intended to hurt someone's feelings
- Can happen to anyone
- Often a one-time incident
- May be due to stress, frustration, or lack of awareness

EXAMPLES

- Interrupting someone
- Not saying "please" or "thank you"
- Talking too loudly
- Cutting in line
- Not including someone

RUDE IS A MISTAKE.

We can learn, do better, and be more thoughtful.

MEAN

HURTFUL BEHAVIOR

Mean behavior is intentional and is meant to hurt someone in the moment. It is usually a single incident or happens occasionally.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

- Done on purpose
- Meant to hurt someone's feelings
- Usually a one-time incident or occasional
- Often based on a strong emotion like anger or jealousy
- Can be resolved with an apology and a change in behavior

EXAMPLES

- Calling someone a name
- Making a hurtful comment
- Laughing at someone
- Being deliberately unkind
- Leaving someone out on purpose

MEAN IS HURTFUL.

We can take responsibility, apologize, and make a change.

BULLYING

A PATTERN OF HURTFUL BEHAVIOR

Bullying is intentional, repeated behavior that involves a power imbalance. It is meant to hurt, frighten, or control another person and can be physical, verbal, social, or online.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

- Done on purpose
- Repeated over time
- There is a power imbalance (physical, social, or emotional)
- Meant to hurt, scare, or control
- Can happen in person or online
- Often makes the target feel unsafe
- Requires intervention and support

EXAMPLES

- Repeated name calling
- Spreading rumors
- Excluding someone over and over
- Threatening or intimidating
- Hitting, pushing, or damaging belongings
- Cyberbullying (hurtful messages, posts, or comments)

BULLYING IS A SERIOUS ISSUE.

It requires support, intervention, and a consistent plan to keep everyone safe at school.
